MBA-635 : Management Information Systems

An overview of contemporary issues related to managing information systems within organizations. The course introduces major information technology concepts that managers face when using, developing and managing information systems for competitive advantage. Topics include information system organization, strategy, knowledge management, IT-based decision making and information systems security and control.

Credits 3
Instructional Method
LEC
Semester Offered
Fall
Spring